ADMINISTRATION 1984-85

Mr. Richard Barkman, Principal

Mr. Timothy Brown, Assistant Principal

The first year of Dekalb Middle School. The beginning of a new concept. The differences? Shorter students, less romance, more crayons, more running in the halls. We never thought that it would be easy but it certainly wasn't as difficult as we imagined. The eighth grade carried themselves well as the upper classmen. They gave the rest of the student body something to admire and respect. They made school seem a fun place to be. The sixth grade proved that they could handle the pressures of changing classes and no recess with dignity and poise. They never once appeared frightened or confused although they must have felt it. In the middle was the seventh grade. They also were newcomers to the building. Yet they had to pretend familiarity in order to be accepted by their peers. They had to quickly capture the care-free attitude of upper classmen and be ready to carry on the tradition of eighth graders next year. And the faculty . . . a blend of elementary and secondary ideas. They tried to use the best ideas from each side. Some were successful; some were not. The most important element of all was that of understanding. We all were able to see the other side of the many problems we faced. We worked together, students and faculty, to overcome these problems and make the first year of D.M.S. a success in every way and to set a pattern for years to come.
